Can you recognize your emotions?

If I ask you how you are feeling, you may answer: "I'm feeling good, I'm fine"! But what does that "good" or "fine" really mean? Would it mean fascinated, curious, balanced, joyful, encouraged, hopeful, motivated, happy?

On the other hand you might also reply: "I'm feeling bad", and, then, recognize that you are feeling bored, lonely, sorry, anxious, fearful, nervous, insecure or frustrated.

The advantage of making such distinctions, rather than feeling "good" or "bad" is that your emotions indicate what you need to do to feel more satisfying.

For example, if you are angry with a person, you can argue with him, you can request him to stop his offensive behavior or you can avoid him. You have choices. Recognize each of your emotions and pay attention to what they are communicating to you.

Flooding hits parts of Midwest, with evacuations in Michigan

People living along two mid-Michigan lakes and parts of a river were evacuated Tuesday following several days of heavy rain that produced flooding and put pressure on dams in the area.

Two Midland-area schools were opened for evacuees and more than 50 roads have been closed. The evacuations in Michigan followed days of heavy rains in parts of the Midwest that also brought flooding to Chicago and other parts of Illinois, as well as Ohio and other states.

"We were laying in bed when I heard sirens," Jon St. Croix told the Midland Daily News. "A fire truck was driving around, broadcasting that (we needed) to evacuate. It's a scary thing — you're sleeping and awake to sirens."

St. Croix, 62, his wife and a next-door neighbor were among more than a dozen people sheltering in one of the schools. Their home was not flooded, but St. Croix said he had seen flooding in the area.

Volunteers at the schools said about 120 vehicles were in the parking lots and about 30 people had been staying on cots inside, according to WNEM-TV.

Home School Tips

Many schools around the world closed because of the coronavirus. Parents must be a substitute teacher, and they learn with their children at home. It is not an easy task.

Some parents expect that their children will work as hard as they do in school. However, parents need to understand that every child is different and works at different speeds. It is important to be kind and thoughtful.

It does not have to be boring to learn. It can be fun, too. When parents teach their children math, they do not need to sit at the table and work with a book. Children can practice math during common activities such as baking or dining.

Experts also say that it is important to communicate with the school and teachers and to stay in contact with school friends.

Hero pilot safely lands passenger plane with no front wheels as sparks fly from nose of jet

A pilot safely landed a passenger plane without using its front wheels after they failed to deploy on arrival at the airport.

Video footage of the emergency touchdown showed sparks flying from the nose of the aircraft as it slid along the runway in Myanmar.

None of the 82 passengers and seven flight crew were injured during the incident at Mandalay International Airport.

Myanmar National Airlines said in a statement that the pilot, Captain Myat Moe Aung, was alerted to the problem by the plane's Engine Indicating and Crew Alerting System (EICAS).

He informed the control tower and tried a backup emergency procedure to pull down the wheels on the Brazilian-made Embraer 190-LR.

The pilot then carried out two fly-bys of the runway to allow air controllers to check visually whether the landing gear had deployed.

After dumping fuel to reduce the landing weight, he brought the aircraft in to land on its rear wheels before the nose slowly tipped down to make contact with the runway at 9.09am on Sunday.

"The pilot did a great job," said Win Khant, permanent secretary of transportation and telecommunication ministry.

A video posted online by one of the passengers showed smoke spreading through the plane before they evacuated the aircraft.

Several of the passengers were smiling as they walked away from the plane.

Flight operations at the airport were suspended for several hours as a result of the incident, which is now under investigation.

"Myanmar national airlines would like to thank all passengers and our crew on board," the company said in a statement.

Last week a Biman Bangladesh Airlines plane skidded off the runway after landing in bad weather in Yangon. At least 15 crew and passengers were injured.

Anne With an E fans wage digital war with Netflix over cancellation

Anne Shirley, the outspoken orphan who first appeared in Lucy Maud Montgomery's 1908 novel, Anne of Green Gables, has since appeared in countless movies and television spinoffs – and built a loyal global following. So it should probably come as little surprise that fans of the show's latest remake – the TV series Anne With an E – are fiercely protective of their heroine. And like Anne, they're willing to fight for what they believe in.

The shows coproducers, Netflix and CBC, announced that the drama would be cancelled after three seasons. "People were outraged. The cast and the crew were also blindsided by it," said Lisa E, a Toronto-based organizer with AWAE Fan Projects. "Everyone loves the show obviously. They just couldn't believe it." The day after the announcement, a group of fans took to Twitter with rallying cry: renew the show. The group's most successful – and most controversial – campaign has been a digital, guerilla-style battle against the two companies.

Oil contaminating Brazil's beaches very likely from Venezuela

Anna Jean Kaiser

Thick crude oil that has stained hundreds of miles of pristine Brazilian beach in recent weeks probably originated in Venezuela, the Brazilian government has said, in an accusation likely to further strain relations between the two countries.

Brazilians authorities have been investigating the growing disaster for more than a month, as the oil has spread to more than 130 beaches across nine states.

Ricardo Salles, the country's environment minister, told that a study by Petrobrás had concluded that the oil "is very likely from Venezuela. He said that a foreign ship near Brazil's coastline appeared to have caused the spill.

There was no immediate response from Venezuela.

Social media users have shared shocking images of the spill, showing kilometers of white sand stained with oil blotches and dead, oil-covered turtles and dolphins. One shows thick black oil lapping up against a rocky jetty.

Adapted from The Guardian.

According to the text, we can infer that _____.

- a) The spill was caused by a domestic ship near Brazilian beaches
- b) No dolphins and turtles died according to the images shared by the media
- c) A dense and natural oil marked hundreds of miles of clean beaches recently
- d) The government is investigating to discover how many beaches are involved in the disaster

Singapore overtakes US as world's most competitive economy

Sherisse Pham

Singapore has knocked the United States out of the top spot in the World Economic Forum's annual competitiveness report.

The index takes stock of an economy's competitive landscape, measuring factors such as macroeconomic stability, the infrastructure, the labor market and the innovation capability.

Singapore pushed the world largest economy down to second place this year. Hong Kong, the Netherlands and Switzerland rounded out the top five. Hong Kong climbed four spots from last year's report, despite the political crisis taking a toll on its economy. The financial hub received high marks for its macroeconomic stability and financial system, but fell short on its capability to innovate.

Adapted from CNN.com

According to the text, choose the correct alternative:

- a) The United States won the best position in the World Economic Forum.
- b) The economy's landscape is measured considering some different factors.
- c) The financial center increased its ability to use new ideas and methods.
- d) Hong Kong reached a lower position in the competition due to the political crisis.

Diary: your life day by day

Most people consider diaries indispensable - a reminder of what they have to do each day. This is especially true in the professional world. A diary can help you keep track of your agenda and make it easier for you to follow a planned schedule. In this sense, it is similar to a notebook with dates in which you write meetings and other things to remember. At school or at work, diaries are very useful.

However, a diary can be more than a list of appointments: it can be a secret record of private thoughts. People write these diaries for different reasons: for fun or to read them years later. "It makes you think and form an opinion on what you are writing" - when you express your feelings and experiences, it's easier to overcome your problems; it's like a therapy.

Nowadays, some people write e-diaries, called blogs or web logs. "They open their hearts" to other people on the Net.

In fact, many people, famous or ordinary in fiction or in real life, write diaries.

Adapted from Inglês de olho no mundo do trabalho.

According to the text, we can infer that:

A diary _____.

- a) is just useful to make a list of our compromises
- b) can be considered essential to those people who use it every day.
- c) is better than a notebook, where people open their hearts on the net
- d) is used to write about our feelings, but it can't help to solve our problems

Mandela

Nelson Mandela has achieved many things, but his greatest influence may be for something he didn't do: run for a second term as South Africa's leader. As the first President of a post-apartheid South Africa, he was, like George Washington, aware that everything he did would be a model for those who would follow. He once said, "I don't want to be an octogenarian President."

What he really meant was that no man - not even one unfairly imprisoned for 27 years - should be above the law or the people. Mandela will remain perhaps the only figure on the world stage who has been an unambiguous moral giant. He could be considered a hero precisely because he always admitted his errors and then tried to rise above them. And never stop learning. He had to catch up on almost three decades of social change, and one of the things he had to learn about was AIDS. At first, this man didn't have the most enlightened view. But within a year-long before other, younger South African leaders - he understood that AIDS was an enormous tragedy for his country and his continent, and he saw it as another moral challenge in a life of facing up to them. That's a moral leadership.

Adapted from Grad Two.

In... "he had to catch up on almost three decades of social change..."; we can infer that Mandela had to _____.

- a) read many things about social change
- b) inform their followers about social change
- c) teach the society procedures
- d) write about the social change

Mandela will remain perhaps the only figure on the world stage who has been an unambiguous moral giant. He could be considered a hero precisely because he always admitted his errors and then tried to rise above them. And never stop learning. He had to catch up on almost three decades of social change, and one of the things he had to learn about was AIDS. At first, this man didn't have the most enlightened view. But within a year-long before other, younger South African leaders - he understood that AIDS was an enormous tragedy for his country and his continent, and he saw it as another moral challenge in a life of facing up to them. That's a moral leadership.

Adapted from Grad Two.

According to the text, we can infer that Nelson Mandela _____. EXCEPT:

- a) used to like George Washington
- b) was able to recognize his mistakes
- c) has never intended to be above the law
- d) knew he was an example for his followers

Mandela

Nelson Mandela has achieved many things, but his greatest influence may be for something he didn't do: run for a second term as South Africa's leader. As the first President of a post-apartheid South Africa, he was, like George Washington, aware that everything he did would be a model for those who would follow. He once said, "I don't want to be an octogenarian President."

What he really meant was that no man - not even one unfairly imprisoned for 27 years - should be above the law or the people. Mandela will remain perhaps the only figure on the world stage who has been an unambiguous moral giant. He could be considered a hero precisely because he always admitted his errors and then tried to rise above them. And never stop learning. He had to catch up on almost three decades of social change, and one of the things he had to learn about was AIDS. At first, this man didn't have the most enlightened view. That's a moral leadership.

According to the text, we can infer that Mandela _____. EXCEPT:

- a) was a straight leader
- b) could be considered a hero
- c) was kept in prison for about 27 years
- d) didn't consider or face AIDS as an issue

Woman wins Picasso painting worth €1m in raffle

An Italian woman has won a painting by Pablo Picasso, worth about €1m (£900,000; $1.1m), in a raffle after being given the ticket as a gift.

The winning ticket was pulled out during a live draw at Christie's auction house in Paris.

The event, which was fundraising for Care charity, had been postponed twice - first to sell more tickets, and then because of coronavirus restrictions.

The prize painting, Nature Morte, is a still life from 1921.

It is a relatively small artwork - measuring 9in by 18in (23cm by 46cm) - which shows a glass of absinthe and a newspaper on a table.

In total €5.1m was raised for the charity by selling 51,000 raffle tickets at €100 each. About 29% of the tickets were sold in France, followed by the US and Switzerland.

Organisers said that €4.2m of proceeds will go towards clean water projects in schools and villages in Madagascar, Morocco and Cameroon.

David Nahmad, the billionaire collector from Monaco who supplied the Picasso painting, will be given €900,000. He also donated €100,000 to Care, organisers said.

"Picasso would have loved an operation like this, because he was someone with a lot of interest in humanitarian and social causes," sale organiser Peri Cochin told Reuters news agency.

Flooding hits parts of Midwest, with evacuations in Michigan

People living along two mid-Michigan lakes and parts of a river were evacuated Tuesday following several days of heavy rain that produced flooding and put pressure on dams in the area.

Two Midland-area schools were opened for evacuees and more than 50 roads have been closed. The evacuations in Michigan followed days of heavy rains in parts of the Midwest that also brought flooding to Chicago and other parts of Illinois, as well as Ohio and other states.

"We were laying in bed when I heard sirens," Jon St. Croix told the Midland Daily News. "A fire truck was driving around, broadcasting that (we needed) to evacuate. It's a scary thing — you're sleeping and awake to sirens."

St. Croix, 62, his wife and a next-door neighbor were among more than a dozen people sheltering in one of the schools. Their home was not flooded, but St. Croix said he had seen flooding in the area.

Volunteers at the schools said about 120 vehicles were in the parking lots and about 30 people had been staying on cots inside, according to WNEM-TV.

www.nbcnews.com

According to the text, we can say that:

- a) The schools were working despite the evacuations.
- b) During the night the Police asked people around to evacuate.
- c) One hundred and twenty volunteers have died because of the flooding.
- d) Because of the heavy rain people who lived around the lakes area had to leave home.

Hero pilot safely lands passenger plane with no front wheels as sparks fly from nose of jet

A pilot safely landed a passenger plane without using its front wheels after they failed to deploy on arrival at the airport.

Video footage of the emergency touchdown showed sparks flying from the nose of the aircraft as it slid along the runway in Myanmar.

None of the 82 passengers and seven flight crew were injured during the incident at Mandalay International Airport.

Myanmar National Airlines said in a statement that the pilot, Captain Myat Moe Aung, was alerted to the problem by the plane's Engine Indicating and Crew Alerting System (EICAS).

He informed the control tower and tried a backup emergency procedure to pull down the wheels on the Brazilian-made Embraer 190-LR.

The pilot then carried out two fly-bys of the runway to allow air controllers to check visually whether the landing gear had deployed.

After dumping fuel to reduce the landing weight, he brought the aircraft in to land on its rear wheels before the nose slowly tipped down to make contact with the runway at 9.09am on Sunday.

"The pilot did a great job," said Win Khant, permanent secretary of transportation and telecommunication ministry.

A video posted online by one of the passengers showed smoke spreading through the plane before they evacuated the aircraft.

Several of the passengers were smiling as they walked away from the plane.

Flight operations at the airport were suspended for several hours as a result of the incident, which is now under investigation.

"Myanmar national airlines would like to thank all passengers and our crew on board," the company said in a statement.

Last week a Biman Bangladesh Airlines plane skidded off the runway after landing in bad weather in Yangon. At least 15 crew and passengers were injured.

www.independent.co.uk

The correct information from the text is:

- a) The name of the Captain is Myat Musk Aung.
- b) There were 82 passengers and eight flight crew.
- c) The passengers were scared when leaving the plane.
- d) On Sunday it was made the contact with the runway.

Anne With an E fans wage digital war with Netflix over cancellation

Anne Shirley, the outspoken orphan who first appeared in Lucy Maud Montgomery's 1908 novel, Anne of Green Gables, has since appeared in countless movies and television spinoffs – and built a loyal global following. So it should probably come as little surprise that fans of the show's latest remake – the TV series Anne With an E – are fiercely protective of their heroine. And like Anne, they're willing to fight for what they believe in.

The shows coproducers, Netflix and CBC, announced that the drama would be cancelled after three seasons. "People were outraged. The cast and the crew were also blindsided by it," said Lisa E, a Toronto-based organizer with AWAE Fan Projects. "Everyone loves the show obviously. They just couldn't believe it." The day after the announcement, a group of fans took to Twitter with rallying cry: renew the show. The group's most successful – and most controversial – campaign has been a digital, guerilla-style battle against the two companies.

Adapted from <https://www.theguardian.com/world/2020/apr/22/anne-withan-e-show-cancelled-angry-fans>

According to the text:

- a) Anne with an E fans started crying when they discovered the show would be canceled.
- b) Like the heroine of the show, Anne's fans fought for their beliefs, as they were outraged by the show's cancellation.
- c) Fans guerrilla fight for the show was successful, and the next season of the show will be called "Anne of Green Gables".
- d) Although the actors of the show knew from the beginning it would only last 3 seasons, they were devastated by the way the series ended.

Diplomat

There are three main aspects to this profession: a diplomat has to keep his country informed about pertinent international events, promote a favorable image of his country and protect his country's interests.

Whoever is interested in a diplomatic career has to be extremely familiar with political, economical, scientific, cultural and administrative issues. To be a diplomat, it is essential to have a good knowledge of English, not only the conversational language, but also the technical terms in international law and diplomacy itself.

To follow this career, besides being fluently bilingual, one needs a standard college education and has to take and do well in the Rio Branco Institute examination in Brasilia.

English is so important in this career that in the first part of this selection exam, the applicant has to demonstrate his or her proficiency in the English language. Then, during the course, foreign language classes become a priority, giving future diplomats the necessary expertise to deal with the areas of official correspondences, diplomatic negotiation and international media.

Oil contaminating Brazil's beaches very likely from Venezuela

Anna Jean Kaiser

Thick crude oil that has stained hundreds of miles of pristine Brazilian beach in recent weeks probably originated in Venezuela, the Brazilian government has said, in an accusation likely to further strain relations between the two countries.

Brazilians authorities have been investigating the growing disaster for more than a month, as the oil has spread to more than 130 beaches across nine states.

Ricardo Salles, the country's environment minister, told that a study by Petrobrás had concluded that the oil "is very likely from Venezuela. He said that a foreign ship near Brazil's coastline appeared to have caused the spill.

There was no immediate response from Venezuela.

Social media users have shared shocking images of the spill, showing kilometers of white sand stained with oil blotches and dead, oil-covered turtles and dolphins. One shows thick black oil lapping up against a rocky jetty.

Singapore overtakes US as world's most competitive economy

Sherisse Pham

Singapore has knocked the United States out of the top spot in the World Economic Forum's annual competitiveness report.

The index takes stock of an economy's competitive landscape, measuring factors such as macroeconomic stability, the infrastructure, the labor market and the innovation capability.

Singapore pushed the world largest economy down to second place this year. Hong Kong, the Netherlands and Switzerland rounded out the top five. Hong Kong climbed four spots from last year's report, despite the political crisis taking a toll on its economy. The financial hub received high marks for its macroeconomic stability and financial system, but fell short on its capability to innovate.

Diary: your life day by day

Most people consider diaries indispensable - a reminder of what they have to do each day. This is especially true in the professional world. A diary can help you keep track of your agenda and make it easier for you to follow a planned schedule. In this sense, it is similar to a notebook with dates in which you write meetings and other things to remember. At school or at work, diaries are very useful.

However, a diary can be more than a list of appointments: it can be a secret record of private thoughts. People write these diaries for different reasons: for fun or to read them years later. "It makes you think and form an opinion on what you are writing" - when you express your feelings and experiences, it's easier to overcome your problems; it's like a therapy.

Nowadays, some people write e-diaries, called blogs or web logs. "They open their hearts" to other people on the Net.

In fact, many people, famous or ordinary in fiction or in real life, write diaries.

Home School Tips

Many schools around the world closed because of the coronavirus. Parents must be a substitute teacher, and they learn with their children at home. It is not an easy task.

Some parents expect that their children will work as hard as they do in school. However, parents need to understand that every child is different and works at different speeds. It is important to be kind and thoughtful.

It does not have to be boring to learn. It can be fun, too. When parents teach their children math, they do not need to sit at the table and work with a book. Children can practice math during common activities such as baking or dining.

Experts also say that it is important to communicate with the school and teachers and to stay in contact with school friends.
